THOUSAND WOUNDED LEAD

Some on Crutches, Others in Wheel Chairs; Empty Casket Placed at the Foot of Triumphal Arch in Memory of Dead, Covered With Wreathes.

By Associated Press.

PARIS, July 14.—The triumphal march of the Allied and American troops through Paris began at 8 o'clock this morning. The weather was brilliant, being more like October than mid-summer. A thousand wounded soldiers with crutches or in wheel chairs and clad for the most part in civilian clothes, led the parade, being preceded by a drum corps. Guns began firing at minute intervals as President Poincaré placed a wreath at the foot of the triumphal arch at 10 o'clock this morning. This empty casket, placed there in memory of the Allied dead, also was decorated by other wreaths, these being placed by Premier Clemenceau, a French soldier, an Alsatian girl, a French sailor, a girl from Lorraine and Colonel Edmund Cox. This last wreath was in memory of 72 members of the Lafayette Escadrille who lost their lives during the war.

Marshal Joffre, the victor of the first battle of the Marne, passed under the Arc Triumphant at 8:45 o'clock. He rode alone. Behind him came Marshal Foch, the commander in chief of the Allied forces during the final campaign of the conflict. A storm of applause arose as the two marshals passed the president's stand and moved down the brilliant avenue.

General John J. Pershing with a number of American generals came next in line. They were received with equal enthusiasm. Forty American organizations, soldiers and marines, marching with wonderful precision, were greeted by a sea of waving handkerchiefs and flags and with deafening cheers.

JUDGE COX MAKES
ATTEMPT TO THRASH
LEO WEIL IN COURT

Exciting Incident Staged During Discussion by Creditors of Piedmont Company Deal Today.

During a discussion by creditors of the proposed sale of the J. V. Thompson holdings to the Piedmont Coal company at the courthouse in Uniontown this afternoon a scene was created when Attorney A. Leo Weil of Pittsburgh, replying to a charge of filibustering by Judge Frank Cox of Morgantown, W. Va., declared "It's a lie."

As the words fell on the ears of Judge Cox he rushed at Weil and was in the act of striking him when Judge R. E. Umbel grasped his up-lifted fist.

During the encounter persons in the courthouse leaped to their seats and cries of "Hit the Jew," "Knock him down," "Put him out," "Smash him" and others were heard.

After quiet had been restored Weil apologized.

Indications at Uniontown today at the meeting of the creditors of J. V. Thompson to consider and take action on the proposed sale of the estate to the Piedmont Coal company were that the sale would be protested and that the case would go back to the United States District court, necessitating the holding of further hearings and taking of testimony.

The meeting was held in Court room No. 1, the office of J. G. Carroll, referee in bankruptcy, proving too small.

This afternoon many attorneys made statements that they were not fully informed as to the conditions of the sale which would compel them to protest against it.

Much of the morning was occupied by the reading of the contract of sale. Judge Frank Cox of Morgantown, W. Va., asked that this be read. Attorney A. Leo Weil of Pittsburgh pointed out that it had been on file, but the contract was ordered read. Out of town attorneys present at the meeting were Judge W. H. Hills of New Martinsville, W. Va.; R. H. Hockheimer and R. S. Douglas, Clarksville, W. Va.; Wainman Conway, Fairmont, W. Va.; F. W. Downey, Waynesburg; Judge Frank Cox, Morgantown, W. Va.; J. P. Miller, Moundsville, W. Va.; S. M. Smith, Waynesburg; E. G. Donnelly, Morgantown, W. Va.; A. Leo Weil, Pittsburgh, and Captain McCaffie, Wheeling, W. Va.

SENATE FORCES LINE UP AGAINST AND FOR TREATY

Actual Battle Begins Today Before Foreign Relations Committee.

CONFABS AT WHITE HOUSE

President Expected to Lose No Time in Efforts to Insure Favorable Action on Pact and League of Nations Covenant; the Jap Treaty?

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—The Senate Foreign Relations committee, beginning consideration today of the peace treaty, reported three minor resolutions bearing in the Versailles negotiations but took no action on the question of asking President Wilson to take part in committee discussions of the treaty.

The resolutions reported would call upon the President and the State Department for information regarding an alleged secret treaty between Japan and Germany regarding a protest said to have been made by General Bliss, Secretary Lansing and Henry White against the Shantung settlement, and why Costa Rica was not permitted to sign the peace treaty.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—President Wilson discussed the peace treaty at some length today with Senators King, Utah, and McKellar, Tenn., Democrats, who were among half a dozen White House callers. It was understood that particular attention was given to the Shantung situation and after the conference Senator King said he was convinced this question eventually would clear itself.

Senator King called at the White House primarily to urge appointment of Abbott McGinnis, a Salt Lake City lawyer, as minister to Bolivia. Both he and Senator McKellar urged that Minister McMillan be given the rank of ambassador and continue as a representative to Peru. Mr. McMillan has been nominated by the President as minister to Guatemala and Minister Gonzales, minister to Cuba, has been nominated as ambassador to Peru. The President suggested to the senators that they take up the matter with the State Department.

While definite information regarding the itinerary of the President's forthcoming tour of the country still was lacking today Senator King said it was his understanding that Mr. Wilson would speak in Utah.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—After weeks of preliminary discussion and maneuvering the actual fight over reserved ratification of the peace treaty, with the League of Nations covenant, begins today in the Senate.

The Foreign Relations committee, to which the treaty was referred on its presentation by President Wilson, begins consideration of the document at a session which may bring action on several collateral issues, including the question whether the President will be invited to appear and be questioned. In the Senate chamber the debate for ratification will be opened by Senator Swanson, Democrat, of Virginia, while at the White House the President, it is considered likely, will begin conferences with pro-league senators over the Senate situation.

Final plans for beginning committee consideration of the treaty have been arranged by the leaders and it is said that while the question of President Wilson's participation in the committee's deliberations remains undecided it is likely that opposition senators will urge several measures bearing directly on the Versailles negotiations.

One of these is Chairman Lodge's resolution asking the President for information as to an alleged secret treaty negotiated in 1918 by which Japan was to safeguard German interests in the peace conference. It is understood the committee will be asked to amend the resolution to make its request more specific.

The lady of the house, resenting the intrusion, fired a charge of buckshot into Bailey. It took effect near the knee and so mangled the limb that amputation was necessary on the arrival of the man at the Mount Pleasant hospital.

M'CLELLANDTOWN PHYSICIAN
USES ROPE TO MAKE NEGRESS
CONFESS TO ROBBING ITALIAN

Drastic methods were used by Dr. D. H. Sangston, Mclellandtown physician this morning to wring from a negress the confession that she and a male companion had robbed an Italian of $110 in cash. When ordinary persuasion failed the doctor produced a rope and placed it about the neck of the negress and threatened to strangle her if she did not "come clean." She broke down and incriminated the negro, who also was captured.

Hurrying down stairs in his night garments the doctor saw a negro and negress passing. Questioned, they said nothing had happened as far as they knew and walked on. A minute or two later an Italian, Andy Gello, came rushing up, excitedly shouting that he had been robbed, describing the negroes. Dr. Sangston hurried to his automobile and started in pursuit. Soon he came upon the woman. Accused, she sank to her knees and pleaded for mercy. Not until the rope was produced did she confess. Resuming the chase the doctor caught the negro. They gave their names as Mrs. Joseph Barber of Parshall works and Harry Blaine of Edenborn.

The two were held prisoners at the doctor's office until the state police arrived.

VETERAN OF 319TH INFANTRY
HAS THRILLING EXPERIENCE
WHEN FREIGHT CARS PILE UP*BIGGER WAR COMING SOON, WARNS BRITISH AIRMAN IN TALK HERE

Captain Bowers, Speaking at Chautauque, Predicts Trouble For England and America.

Predicting another and bigger war in the near future, Captain Paul Bowers, a British air observer, gave those who attended Chautauque Sunday afternoon rather a severe jolt, with the peace treaty signed and most of the service men home, the prospect of more fighting seemed rather remote. Captain Bowers was rather vague as to the character of the impending war, though he said to his hearers: "You'll die and I'll die," which would indicate that English and American were to be allied against a common enemy.

"There is too much hate and too little love in this world today," the airman declared. "Too little generosity and kindness and sympathy and true Christian spirit to expect real peace."

Captain Bowers also predicted a revolution in England by the time he arrives home and indicated that he would take part in it. "The king may be gone," he said, "not that he matters much at that and it will be a very nasty affair."

Paying a tribute to America as a wonderful country and praising the American fighters, the visitor rather deprecated the patriotism of his own countrymen. "The Union Jack means nothing to us," he declared. "We joined up because the other fellow joined up, I suppose. Englishmen were not keen to fight. At the beginning of the war we took no interest in it at all."

The main feature of Captain Bowers' address was a realistic description of a night bombing raid over the German lines to Bruges, where the docks were shelled from the air by the British almost nightly and tremendous damage done to the submarine base.

PLANE OVER CITY

Appears Out of East and Disappears Toward the South.

An airplane, flying low enough that the pilot could be plainly distinguished, appeared out of the east Sunday morning about 9:30 o'clock, flew over the city and disappeared toward the south. Though it came down far enough for the city people, especially those in the Snyderstown district, to get a good view, no identification marks were visible.

It was evident that the aviator was no sure of his course. After sighting the river, it seemed, he ascended to a great height and flew away in the general direction of Washington. A "flying circus" of seven planes left Hempstead, L. I., on Friday late, bound for Texas, but whether this plane was one of them which had lost its way is a matter of conjecture. The circus was scheduled to stop at Washington.

CHAUTAUQUA'S FUTURE HERE IN DOUBTFUL CLASS

No Movement to Insure Return of Entertainments Next Year.

MAY BE TAKEN UP LATER

Guarantor Plan Dropped Year Ago and 1919 Chautauque Came Under the Individual Pledge System; Bomber's Lecture and Concert Final Numbers

The 1919 Chautauque closed Sunday night with no steps taken toward having it returned next year. Not even the usual pledge cards were circulated; in fact, the only mention of a 1920 Chautauque was that by Rev. G. W. Buckner in a congratulatory address. It is evident, however, that if Chautauque is to include Connellsville on its circuit next year, assurance of support will have to be given by the people at large.

The guarantor plan, by which about 40 men pledged themselves to dispose of enough tickets to assure its appearance, was dropped last year, the 1918, 1917 and 1916 Chautauques having been secured in that way. In 1918 the usual pledge cards were circulated and Chautauque was here this year on the strength of them.

W. A. Zaugg, superintendent of Chautauque this year, states that an agent of the Redpath bureau may appear here later to see what support can be secured for the 1920 program.

At the concluding number of the Chautauque program last night a large audience was present, all of the churches having abandoned their evening services in its favor. The program was in religious form. Rev. I. G. Nace, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, offered prayer, and Rev. G. W. Buckner, pastor of the Christian church, spoke on behalf of Chautauque, as representative of the ministerial association. He praised the work of the institution and emphasized the fact that it ought to form a permanent place in the life of the community.

A sacred concert was given by the Weber Male Quartette, a well balanced singing organization. An hour's program of wide variety was offered. The quartette also sang a few numbers in the afternoon as a prelude to the address by Captain Paul Bowers, the English airman, who described graphically, a night bombing raid on Bruges, a German submarine base, in Belgium during the war.

On Saturday afternoon the Karyl Sextette gave a full concert and in the evening played a prelude, after which Katherine Ridgeway gave a very fine program of readings.

SAVED SAM'L OAKS FROM TERRIBLE CASE OF ILLNESS

Twice Nerv-Worth Did This. For Prospect Street Man and He Tells About It.

This is the latest Nerv-Worth endorsement to be received by the Connelville Drug Company. In source and character it is a telling statement.

Connelville Drug Company.—For twenty years I have doctored and taken all kinds of remedies for nervousness, sleeplessness, stomach trouble and indigestion, without relief whatever. My legs ached and I felt weak, tired and listless. Did not have the nerve force to get myself together or digest my food.

I procured a bottle of Nerv-Worth and took it as directed and all these troubles left me, and I am feeling strong and vigorous.

One evening I was suddenly stricken with a pain over my left eye. I got so cold I could not get anything to warm me up. Had a severe pain in my left leg. Went to bed and then I thought I would burn up. I commenced taking Nerv-Worth and soon gained relief and am feeling fine now.

I certainly headed off the "flu" before it got a good hold on me. I am very enthusiastic about Nerv-Worth as it saved me a terrible sickness and possibly death.

Your dollar back at the Connelville Drug Company if Nerv-Worth does not benefit you. The Broadway Drug Company sells Nerv-Worth in Scottsdale. Adv.

You are welcome to use this letter for the benefit of other suffering women."—Mrs. F. A. GAINES, R. R. No. 1, Steele, Ala.

INDEPENDENTS WIN

Scottsdale Team Takes Over Strong Star Junction Outfit, 12-5.

SCOTSDALE, July 14.—After defeating the fast Smithton baseball team in a 12-inning contest on July 4, at Ellsworth park, Scottsdale, before a crowd of some 2,500 people, the Independents were made a generous offer to play at Star Junction on July 12. The Star Junction team is a fast bunch of young players who have been staging some close games with some fast teams. But in Saturday's game Scottsdale started off by scoring two runs the first two innings. So with a lead of four runs, at no time was the game in danger and ended with the score 12-5. In the fourth inning Star Junction started a rally, but the lead was too great to overcome. Guest pitched a good game and kept the hits well scattered. Beyer's batting was a feature of the game, he getting four hits.

A large number of baseball fans made the trip and are now satisfied that Scottsdale has a team that can hold its own with any other in the county.

The home team changed its line-up several times, but with the same result. The hitting of the visitors could not be checked.

MORE RED BLOOD AND STEADIER NERVES FOR RUN DOWN PEOPLE

The World Demands, Strong, Vigorous, Keen-Minded, Men and Women

It has been said of Americans that they work their habits over time.

Many become nervous and inefficient by overwork. By worry, despondency, social affairs, robbing brain and body of needed rest; excessive use of tobacco, indulgence in strong alcoholic drink—excesses of every kind that burn up the vital powers so necessary in these trying times to make both men and women fit to be of help to themselves and others.

It is time to be temperate in all things. The man or woman with impaired nerves caused by impoverished blood lacks vigor, the ambition, the endurance and the keen mind of those who avoid excesses.

Timidity, despondency, fear, trembling hands, want of confidence and even cowardliness, are due in a large measure to abused nerves. People with plenty of red blood corpuscles and strong, healthy nerves have no desire to shirk work and lean on others for guidance and support. There is hardly a nerve-shattered man or woman (unless of an organic disease) in America today who cannot become alert and clear in mind; vigorous and energetic in body. It is a very few weeks and at trifling cost.

SLUGGER FLAGSTEAD WINS REGULAR JOB

Bookie Got Into Line-Up When Shorten Was Injured.

Has Played Excellent Ball in All Departments and is Hitting Above .300 Mark—Not Expected That He Will Fizzle.

Ira Flagstead, who was secured by the Detroit Tigers from the Chattanooga team of the Southern association, where he gained a reputation of being a consistent hitter, went well during the training stay at Macon and subbed in center in the early games before Cobb joined the club. Then he was on the bench and he was expected to stay there, to be ready for emergency duty in the outfield.

The rest is an old story. Shorten injured his leg near the end of the training trip, got in the opening game against Cleveland and then was forced out of the lineup when his leg again gave him more trouble.

Flagstead got three hits in that second game against the Indians, has played excellent ball in all departments ever since and now is the club's regular right fielder. He has been hitting more than .300 most of the time, much of it in pinches. Shorten's misfortune was his good fortune.

Many other ball players with batting marks almost as big as Flagstead's have come from the minors and failed in the majors where they found the pitching too good. Ira may also fail for the same reason, but there seems little chance. He has faced the best pitching in the league and hit far above the average, in fact that is why he is sticking in right, after starting there as a substitute. Many minor league phenoms have been curve-balled out of the majors but Flagstead has shown no weakness against this kind of pitching.

He is fast on his feet, covers a lot of ground and has a strong arm. He has faced several trying situations and his judgment at those times has been good.

LOSE SERVICES OF HUNTER

Sailor Has Been Transferred From San Pedro Submarine Base to Atlantic Station.

San Francisco has lost the services of Herb Hunter probably for the season. He had been playing with the Seals while on a furlough from the navy but now he has been transferred from the San Pedro submarine base to an Atlantic coast station, and even if he does get a layoff from Uncle Sam now and then he can't hop back to Frisco. The navy has put the lid a release temporarily.

YOUNG HILDEBRAND USES HEADWORK IN GAMES.

Umpire George Hildebrand of the American league has a twelve-year-old son out in California who already is exhibiting the strategy—headwork it is called for short—that indicates he either will be a great ball player or a millionaire railroad magnate or a master safe bower. The umpire got a letter from the precocious youngster the other day in which the twelve-year-old told of a game of ball he had pitched. He wrote Papa Hildebrand thusly:

"It was a pretty good game and we beat them 4 to 2. They never scored on me till the fifth. I didn't have anything on the ball but my fingers. Out of the lot was out, so every time I got in a hole I just threw the ball over easy, and over the fence it was hit, ending the inning. I was never in a hole except in the fifth. Then I used my headwork."

Well say he did.

THE FULL ARMORED BANK

"We have talked so much about armored ships, armored air craft and war tanks that it seems only appropriate to speak of the armored bank," said James L. Kurtz, cashier of the Citizens National bank, 138 Pittsburgh street, Connelville, to a reporter of The Courier. "This bank," he said, "is full armored." His large resources, strong management and federal government supervision assure positive safety for deposits.

At the Theatres

THE SOISSON.

THE BETTER OLE—Probably the most talked about play that has appeared on the stage in several seasons, is being presented today. The story is based on the cartoons and stories of Captain Bruce Bairnsfather and details the romance of Old Bill. The screen version is a candy, thought by many to be far superior to the stage play and it is the sort of a picture that will interest and amuse everyone. The picture has been the big comedy success of the season. It shows the British army in trenches, dugouts and behind the lines. It admirably portrays the humor of the great war and is not overdrawn in any particular. No attempt has been made to weave any great story. A plot, of course, has been used, just enough to make the audience wonder what is going to happen next. There are laughs in this production. Bert's cigar lighter, which never works, Alf's love affairs with numerous French maidens that are always interrupted by blundering good natured Old Bill is a picture that everyone will thoroughly enjoy and one that will live long in the history of pictures. It is not a war picture, it is a comedy. Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, the father of the British army, while on watch in a front line trench one night drew a cartoon and sent it to friends in London. It was published, and from then on until the play was presented the entire world waited with impatience the next Bairnsfather drawing. The picture has been well produced.

THE PARAMOUNT.

THE LION'S DEN—The latest Metro play in which Bert Lytle is seen in the role of Rev. Sam Webster who is determined to install a boys' club in connection with his church. He wants to give them the benefit of the gymnasium, a swimming pool, bowling alleys and reading rooms but the parish is a poor one and he lacks the funds. He determines to collect the money from the more influential members of the community but his efforts are unsuccessful. He finally gives up the idea when Steadman, the leading and richest man in town offers him the insignificant sum of $25. Undaunted however he decides to enter the house den of commerce and earn money for himself. With this in view he opens a grocery store, deciding to compete with the close-fisted Steadman. He preaches in his church on Sundays and on week days sells prunes and other delicacies to the adoring old maids of the town who flock to patronize him. Steadman, furious at the success of his rival, decides to cause his ruin. How the minister succeeds and is the means of saving those who have slandered and almost ruined him and the amazing outcome of the incident provides a play of many surprises. A selected comedy is also being presented. Tomorrow Gladys Leslie will be presented in Too Many Crooks.

DAWSON July 12.—The fast Layton stars came to Dickerson Run last evening and met the Y. M. C. A. team on the Y. M. C. A. field and defeated them by a score of 5 to 2 before a large crowd. It was anyone's game up until the eighth inning when the Layton boys scored three runs on poor support to Ramon, who pitched a fine game, as he had 15 strikeouts to his credit, but poor support and lack of hitting lost the game. Theory and Practice.

"I trust, Brother Johnson, said the predding elder, "that you are endeavoring as far as possible to bring up your children by the rule of kindness, requesting rather than commanding, and explaining to them carefully why they should obey your injunctions?" "That's powerful gaudy," in the try, parson," returned Cap Johnson, of Rumpus Ridge "but in actual practice knocking 'em down with a necktie now and then is about the only way to fetch results. I could just about as quick get 'em to mind me be arguing with 'em as I could make a turtle giggle by tickling his lid with a feather!"—Kansas City Star.

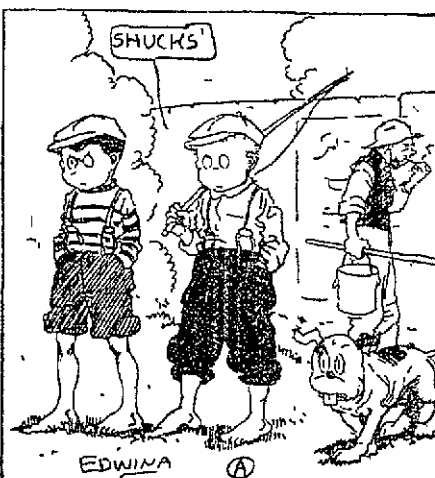

Her Sex's Falling

Delmer usually walked to school with Mattie his little neighbor next door, but nearly always had to wait for her. One morning he was obliged to wait an unusually long time for Mattie to get her hair curled and later he confided to his mother that he was not going to walk to school with her any more. His mother asked him why he had decided to go without waiting for Mattie. "Well," he replied "when I call for her I always find her so unready."

MAKING THE LEAGUE PARTISAN.

The conviction having become more general that the proposed League of Nations, as at present constituted, means the perpetuation of war instead of perpetual peace, the change of the Democrats to make the league partisan may be forced upon the Republicans. Members of the latter party in Congress have at all times been opposed to making consideration of the league a party question. They have insisted upon considering this instrument from the viewpoint of Americans, and the effect our membership in the league will have upon our national sovereignty, but President Wilson and the party of which he is the titular head, insist upon drawing party lines on the issues involved.

The Republican and several Democratic members of the Senate are determined in their opposition to the covenant in its present form. One group demands a separation of the peace pact and the league covenant before either is seriously considered. Another group insists upon ratification of the covenant if sufficient modifications are made in it to safeguard American rights and interests. Still another group, which is the largest of the three, insists upon the ratification of the covenant in its present form, and the final repudiation of the whole proposition as an American in spirit, purpose and tendencies.

On the other hand the Democrats, with a few exceptions, favor the unqualified endorsement of both the league and the peace treaty in the form reported to the Senate by President Wilson. As such a course would obligate us to take part in every war that might be started in Europe under any pretext whatever, the Republicans are entirely willing to have the Democrats make the league issue partisan.

"The same power that sent American soldiers to fight in Russia when we were not at war with that country would have power under the Wilson league to command the American boys to go to war in any European country," is the way one Pennsylvania Republican has stated the proposition. "We want peace that will allow the American boys to keep out of European wars," he concluded.

That being the situation the Republicans merely insist that the league covenant be made to conform to the advance notices which so loudly proclaimed it as an assurance of perpetual peace, not as a means to perpetuate war. If that be partisanship, let Democrats make the most of it.

TIME TO EXPRESS WILL OF PEOPLE IN LAWS.

President Wilson evidently regards himself as a better judge of the needs and desires of the farmers of the country than they themselves are, judging from the action in vetoing the agricultural Department appropriation bill and the daylight saving repealer.

Consideration of the daylight saving proposition in Congress developed the fact that the farming interests are opposed to the permanent adoption of the plan. As a war measure they complied with it just as cheerfully as they responded to the calls for increased food and meat production or other measures designed to help win the war. When it was proposed to apply it as the future order they objected. Relieving the sentiment thus expressed was representative of a larger element in our population than favored the retention of daylight saving. Congress yielded to it and enacted a repealer. Fearing the measure would stand less chance of approval by the President if made separate and apart from the agricultural appropriation bill, it was attached as a rider to the latter, just as the wartime prohibition measure had previously been attached.

It is true the country at large does not look with favor upon the practice of Congress in making one measure the vehicle for carrying through another which has only remote, if any, relation to the principal one. It smacks of trickery, but situations and conditions sometime develop in Congress when such a course seems to be necessary. The repeal of daylight saving is a case in point, when it was made a part of one of the most important appropriations. Being opposed to the repeal President Wilson has apparently been willing to oppose the wish of the farmers in this matter even at the risk of occasioning a delay in the enactment of an appropriation bill to carry on the work of that governmental department which is of most vital concern to the agricultural industry.

Congress is now confronted with the necessity of doing one of two things. It can pass the bill without amendment over the President's veto, or it can separate the measures and re-consider each upon its own merits. The latter course would perhaps appeal to the public as the better measure, as it would provide a better opportunity for Congress to determine whether the sentiment favoring the repeal of daylight saving is really preponderant over that favoring making the system permanent.

Neither Congress nor President Wilson can well afford to ignore the protests of the farmers on this issue. By nature of their occupation farmers have always utilized more hours of daylight than any other class of persons, hence they have very valid objections to the new system except as a war measure. Beginning the day by the sun instead of the clock, and closing it by the latter instead of the former is a distinct disadvantage to the farmer. Whether this disadvantage is compensated in the general economy of things, by the advantage of giving another hour of daylight to the workers in other occupations, is a matter both Congress and the President should determine with a greater degree of exactness than either at this time seems to possess.

The country has had quite enough regulation and restriction by proclamation, edict and executive order. It is time opportunity were given to the wishes of the people given expression in duly enacted laws.

Receipt of tax notices will help relieve us from the dullness following the strenuous program of last week.

If every department of the celebration has as complete a report to file and as small expense account as the emergency department of safety has filed, the subscribers to the fund will have no cause for complaint. Instead, they will have cause for congratulation.

Blading the firemen's convention with a water battle was appropriate when considered in relation to the season prevailing since July 1 and the use of water in their daily occupation as fire fighters.

Although we now lack the diversions provided by last week's big list of attractions we can take heart from the fact that the open season for candidates will soon be here.

Wound Stripes for Industrial Heroes

There was a time when the sight of a cripple aroused a feeling of pity mingled with revulsion. The loss of a leg or arm, it was thought, effectively disabled the victim for further utility in life. But this has been changed. Thousands of men have come back from the other side wounded with various degrees of severity. They walk about with the proud demeanor which shows that they consider their wounds an honor rather than a cause for pity; they take on jobs and discharge them so competently that nobody who has had experience with wounded soldiers in his employ can think any more that the so-called "cripple" is really crippled for further usefulness in the industrial system.

The army is going to reimburse every man who was disabled in the great war. It will reimburse him not merely by payment of money, but money is of secondary importance in this particular case—it will reimburse him rather by making him able to compete successfully with other men possessing their full complement of limb and health. The army will teach every one of its wounded soldiers a trade or a profession. It will make him able to be successfully self-supporting and to pay his way in society as he goes.

After the first step has been taken, of convincing him that his misfortune need not interfere with a normal and useful life for him, the wounded man is turned over to a staff of vocational guides who help him choose a line of work on the basis of a scientific examination of his preferences and possibilities. These vocational guides have already helped many men into the kind of work for which they are far happier than they were in the jobs they held before the war. "No square pegs in round holes," is the slogan of these vocational guides who are helping to smooth out the future for our wounded heroes.

For every one of these men who is turned out a trained member of society, Colonel Arthur Woods and his army of assistants are endeavoring to obtain satisfactory work. The government departments with their field representatives, private welfare organizations, merchants' associations and labor unions—every agency for employment in the United States, working under the unifying guidance of Colonel Arthur Woods, is in the field to put these men into the jobs for which they are best fitted and in which they will be most useful and happiest. It is the intention of the War Department that none of these men, who have participated in the greatest war in the world's history and have showed enough come-back

ILLEGAL RUM MAKING PORTO RICO INDUSTRY

Moonshiners Multiply So Fast Authorities Cannot Keep Lists Up to Date.

Moonshiners multiply daily in Porto Rico. Nearly 100 stills have been raided by the police.

Making contraband rum is easy and cheap, and the profit is great. All that's needed is a rude still and a supply of molasses, always plentiful. The rum bonds will pay from $2 to $3 for a small bottle of the stuff.

The risk of a fine of from $25 to $100 is no barrier to the native who would rather risk than work.

While the San Juan police chief was preparing a list of 35 stills that had been seized since the first of the year, reports came in of the seizure of as many more. From the arrests made in the 35 seizures there have been nine convictions and a total of $670 in fines assessed. But two jail sentences have been passed, one 30 days and one three months. There have been two acquittals and the remainder of the cases have not yet been heard.

Rum seizures recorded by the police are 278 stills, 2,100 half pints, one demijohn, 64 liters and 19 gallons. There are 61 half pints of wine, 22 bottles of anise, 50 gallons of alcohol and 84 bottles of beer. Altogether the police have quite a little of liquor, but there isn't any use for it.

Capt. W. J. Kennedy may collect $250,000 from the wreck of the schooner Madeline Shirley Lord. The crew abandoned the schooner off Ponce with a cargo of a half million dollars' worth of Martinique rum bound for France. Kennedy smelled it out and put his crew aboard. He saved the rum from the fishes and is entitled to half the salvage. It's under the lock and key of the collector of customs at Ponce and can't be sold here, but is likely to be trans-shipped to some port where Kennedy can collect.

SPURNS A REWARD

Man Accepts $20 for $175 Find Under a Protest.

Mrs. John Springer, who lives three miles south of Noblesville, Ind., had abandoned hope of finding a purse containing almost $175, which she lost somewhere between Cincinnati and her home, when a neighbor came to her with a copy of The Indianapolis News, in which there appeared a story to the effect that J. A. Davidson, living west of Connersville, had found a purse with about that sum in it, and was eagerly seeking the owner. Mrs. Davidson hired an automobile and drove to this city.

Davidson, a huckster and a poor man, immediately surrendered the purse when told the denomination of the bills. He accepted, reluctantly, a reward of $20, insisting that he had his reward in placing the purse in the hands of its owner. Davidson lost two pounds of coffee on the sidewalk in Connersville when he went to advertise his find, and although he immediately retraced his steps, the package was gone. He still is annoyed at the recollection of this incident.

LITTLE KNOWN OF ST. MARK

Facts as to History of Evangelist Have Been Lost in the Passage of Years.

St. Mark, the evangelist, is believed to have been born of Jewish parents, deriving their origin from the tribe of Levi. He is also thought to have been "sister's son" to the apostle St. Peter, though some have confounded him with John, surnamed Mark, "sister's son" to St. Barnabas. He was probably converted by St. Peter, and was his constant attendant in his travels. He is traditionally said to have founded the church in Aquileia, and there to have written the gospel which bears his name. St. Mark suffered on April 25, though the certain year of his martyrdom is not precisely determined by the ancients. St. Mark's symbol is the lion, because he has set forth the royal dignity of Christ, or, according to other writers, on account of his beginning with the mission of St. John the Baptist, which is figured by the lion; or to a legend that was popularly believed in the middle ages, that the young of the lion was born dead, and after three days was awakened by the voice of its sire, symbolical of the resurrection.

No Novelty.

"How did you find the fellow that runs the Busy Bee store?" inquired an acquaintance.

"I just rummaged around till I unearthed him," replied a citizen of Sandy Mound, Ark., who had been shopping in Tammulville.

"Yes, but I heard that he was in military bad health?"

"Maybe so. He may have been puny, but I didn't notice it. I found him asleep in the back room sitting on a keg, and when I asked him if he had any axle grease he bowed he had, but wanted to know if I couldn't just as well come around later, when he'd probably be standing up. Nope, I didn't see anything peculiar about him." Kansas City Star.

Muscular Music.

AMERICAN UNIVERSITIES ARE URGED TO MAKE STRONG BID FOR STUDENTS FROM ABROAD

Will the United States help build up the civilization of the future by opening wide the doors of her colleges and universities to students from all over the world? Can Germany reestablish her educational prestige and draw students to her, first from the Near East and later from other countries against whom she fought in the war? Is America to assume the educational leadership to which her new responsibilities call her? These are questions asked by the Bureau of Education, Department of the Interior, in a special article in School Life, an official publication of the bureau.

In a letter to college and university officers in this country the commissioner of education writes: "The higher educational institutions of Western Europe have been prostrated by the war. Large numbers of the leading scientists and of the younger men whose scientific careers were just beginning have been killed. Because the intellectual resources of the United States have not been similarly drained, the western nations are looking to the United States to assume the responsibilities of leadership in education and in science. That the colleges and universities of the United States appreciate these responsibilities and are endeavoring to meet them is evidenced by the various movements that have been undertaken to promote closer educational relations between this country and the western allies.

"Apparently Germany expects to regain the influence which she formerly exerted over foreign nations by means of her universities, technical schools and scientific institutes. This office is informed that efforts have already been made by German educational institutions to recover their clientele of foreign students, especially from the countries in the Near East adjacent to or contiguous to Germany. There is, of course, no immediate prospect that she could make a successful appeal to the students of Great Britain, France or Italy. Students and young scientists in Czechoslovakia, Jugoslavia, Russia, Roumania and western Asia are much more likely to be drawn to German universities and to technical schools Germany is near and they know about it. The cost of living is lower than in some of the remotest countries, especially the United States. Nevertheless, it is believed that students from these countries would gladly come to the United States if they were familiar with its educational opportunities, and particularly if they could be assured of sufficient means to complete their education. Evidently, it is desirable that the tide of students should be turned this way rather than to Germany. Moreover, the countries themselves need assistance. To render this is part of the responsibility involved in our new position of leadership.

"The State Department suggests, and this department cordially indorses its suggestion, that the college officers of the country give this problem their attention. If they are generally disposed to encourage the coming of students from these countries by means of scholarships or special provisions for self-help, their offerings can be reported to the Bureau of Education transmitted to the State Department, and through the agents of that department brought to the attention of educational authorities in the lands mentioned."

In this connection the Bureau of Education is issuing the bulletin, "Opportunities for Foreign Students at Colleges and Universities in the United States," and is planning the preparation of a very much briefer statement that can be translated into the languages of certain of these countries and distributed through the agents of the State Department.

NQ HE DIDN'T RUN.

A colored boy named Sam, while rumbling through the woods, came on a hornet's nest. With rare courage for one so young he flung a stick into the abiding place of the little arthropods, with the usual quick results. Sam made a hundred yards in two-fifths of a second less than nothing.

"You didn't run, I hope, Sam," said a white "gemmen" to whom Sam related the episode.

"Well, mistap, I wouldn't say 'factly that I run, but a man in a field 'cross the road said he couldn't see nothin' of me fun mah wals' down."

NOW IS THE TIME

To Build Up Permanently Nature At Its Best As In Aid.

If you who are weak, nervous and run-down from over-work, worry or any other cause would only realize that the summer months is the time to build up strength and vigor there would not be so many collapses and rushing for aid during the winter.

The plan to follow is simple—plenty of rest and good wholesome food along with a strength-creating body-building tonic. Chasco-Vin with its Iron, Manganese, Hypophosphites, Nux and other strength-making ingredients, is the tonic we suggest.

If you follow this plan carefully you will notice a wonderful improvement in two weeks time. But don't give up too soon.

The local agents for Chasco-Vin are C. Roy Hetzel, Woolworth Bldg. and A. A. Clarke, 123 Pittsburg St.—Adv.

SPURNS A REWARD

Man Accepts $20 for $175 Find Under a Protest.

Mrs. John Springer, who lives three miles south of Noblesville, Ind., had abandoned hope of finding a purse containing almost $175, which she lost somewhere between Cincinnati and her home, when a neighbor came to her with a copy of The Indianapolis News, in which there appeared a story to the effect that J. A. Davidson, living west of Connersville, had found a purse with about that sum in it, and was eagerly seeking the owner. Mrs. Davidson hired an automobile and drove to this city.

Davidson, a huckster and a poor man, immediately surrendered the purse when told the denomination of the bills. He accepted, reluctantly, a reward of $20, insisting that he had his reward in placing the purse in the hands of its owner. Davidson lost two pounds of coffee on the sidewalk in Connersville when he went to advertise his find, and although he immediately retraced his steps, the package was gone. He still is annoyed at the recollection of this incident.

NEW DUTIES FOR "SUPERCARGOES"

This "Comeback" Upon the Seas Trained for Many Things.

CARE OF CARGO ONE DUTY

Corps Organized by the United States Shipping Board Takes Field of Activities Specialized and Broadened Far Beyond Duties of His Fore-runner of Olden Days—Many Applicants for the Work.

The supercargo of today is a "comeback" upon the seas but to a field of activities specialized and broadened so far beyond the duties of his fore-runner of the olden days that should one of those dignified old gentlemen step out of the reserve that probably still surrounds him in shadow land and see a supercargo of the United States shipping board in action, he would step right back again with out waiting even to register a complaint about how times have changed. The mere supervision of cargo is but one of the multitudinous duties of these modern trade scouts of the seas. They must have eyes for every thing from the depth of water and condition of the dock to the length of skirt affected by bellies of the boulders, from the quality of bunker coal to the shade of face powder most adaptable to the complexion of the country.

The supercargoes are a highly selective body of men organized by the United States shipping board and put through a course of intensive training to fit them for the duties they are now performing on the ships under control of the board. It is expected that our merchant marine of the future will draw from this corps many of the broad visioned executives who will be called upon to handle big shipping business and keep American commerce to the forefront among all the nations of the earth.

When the shipping board finally determined upon the organization of the corps of supercargoes and the establishment of the new service a call was issued for young men of special qualifications to take up the work. The response was spontaneous and well nigh overwhelming.

Selection Was Made.

Out of the thousands of applicants 350 men have been selected and trained in groups of duty. They are now at work in the new field and are lending invaluable aid in the solution of vital problems affecting the operation of ships.

The supercargo is first expected to acquaint himself with the organization and history of the United States shipping board and the general duties of a supercargo as they relate to a ship and its cargo. Then he is taught enough about marine insurance to learn what bearing it has upon the profitable operation of ships. After that he must learn what is expected of him in observation and reports upon other matters.

Once aboard ship the supercargo must still prove himself worthy of the important position for which he is training. He must show himself tactful, both in his relations with the officers and crew of the vessel to which he is attached and with the officers and workmen of ports and harbors where his vessel may touch. He is expected to make a report embracing practically everything of interest that happens at sea in port and ashore until his vessel is again tied up in her home port.

Nothing Theoretical

There is nothing theoretical about the work of the supercargo. He must not only be practical but show himself alive to every opportunity to benefit the interests of the United States in the shipping world. He must establish this by his work or admit himself unfit for further duty as a supercargo. In the hardy of call upon the seas when the United States was really a power among maritime nations and the telegraph and cable were virtually unknown it was necessary for shipping interests to have a traveling representative aboard ship who directed the disposition and purchase of cargo and ordered the sailing of the vessel as they affected the taking on and discharge of cargo. He was known as the supercargo.

The supercargo of today will perform the same duties under the advantage of direct telegraphic wires and cable contact with ship operators. He also will act in conjunction with the captain of the ship in herding the ship and in all business pertaining to the operation of the ship with the object of reducing to a minimum the overhead charges. In his other duties which have been called those of a shipping and trade scout the supercargo must act without infringing upon the work of any other government agency.

It is rather a big order to find men possessed of such qualifications but with 17,000 young men of the best type to pick from and countless thousands more in reserve the shipping board has no fear about the efficiency of its corps of supercargoes.

Sleep Saves His Auto

Charles Libby of New Oxford, Pa., fell asleep in his automobile which he had standing on Frederick street and was suddenly aroused to see a stranger at the wheel and the engine chugging to start off. Libby's awakening attracted the attention of the stranger who suddenly realized he had a passenger and probably the owner for he jumped and disappeared. The machine was moving by that time and before Libby could get control of the wheel the auto had collided with an other automobile.

THERE ARE STILL A FEW OF THE VETERAN SLUGGERS FACING BIG LEAGUE PITCHERS

One by one the great sluggers who have blazed a trail of hits across the baseball horizon for the last ten or fifteen years are passing along.

Hitters like Hans Wagner and Sam Crawford, for instance, are few and far between these days but there are still a few of the veteran sluggers facing major league pitchers today and one of the most picturesque of the lot is "Cactus" Cravath.

The "Old Cactus" has been playing ball actively for sixteen years and the ravages of time have long since begun to show for Cravath's legs today refuse to carry him around the gardens as they once did and there are a few sprinkles of silver on his temples.

Cravath 37 Years Old

But although Cravath is thirty seven years of age—having celebrated his thirty seventh birthday last March—he still ranks as a demon at the bat. Talking a toe hold and swinging from the hip is just as natural to Cravath as it ever was. And National League pitchers tell you that his eye has not been dimmed to any extent by the suns of 16 summers.

Making four hits out of five times at bat is a feat often accomplished in baseball yet not by one player. Cravath in his many years of slaughtering the off rings of pitchers has registered four hits in one day many times. In the opening series between the Giants and Phillies he added another such performance to his long list and two of the four hits he made in the second game against McGrawmen were doubles.

Ruth Is Hard Hitter
Babe Ruth is a tremendously hard hitter but capable as he is with the bingdon he will probably never be able to rank as the consistent day in and day out slugger Cravath has been. Crawford and Wagner were bitters of the Cravath type or vice versa. Jake Daubert when at his best was also a biter of this select type.

It is a pleasure to pay tribute to a player like the Old Cactus. His weatherbeaten hide is impervious to the criticisms that have been showered on his head by writers during the last two or three years—kind criticism sure enough—but the kind that carries predictions which tell freedom that a player is through—and Cravath isn't through yet.

Wedded on a Stump

It was in Marietta county Ga. that a locality noted for trees of enormous growth. The top of a red wood stump, smooth and level as the woodsman's saw had left it and over 20 feet in diameter was the place chosen for this wedding ceremony. Decorated with the wonderful wild flowers of the region and surrounded by giant trees no places could be more beautiful or impressive.

The bride and bridegroom the minister and 50 guests, ascended a few flights of steps about six feet to the top of the stump and found seats provided and ample room for all.

After the ceremony was over the bride and groom took place the musicians occupying a place on the stump as well as the dancers.

"Look here," said George abruptly. "How about this man Morgan and his sewing machine? Doesn't he want to get grandfather to put money into it? Isn't he trying to work Uncle George for that? Isn't that what he's up to?"

It was Miss Fanny who responded. "You little silly!" she cried, with surprising sharpness. "What on earth are you talking about? Eugene Morgan is perfectly able to finance his own adventures these days."

"He strikes me as that sort of man," George answered doggedly. "Isn't he, father?"

Minister turned down his paper for the moment. "He was a fairly wild young fellow twenty years ago," he said, glancing at his wife absently. "He was like you in one thing, George: he spent too much money—only he didn't have any mother to get money out of a grandfather for him, so he was usually in debt. But I believe I've heard he's done fairly well of late years. No, I can't say I think he's a swindler, and I doubt if he needs anybody else's money to back his horseless carriage."

"Well, what's he brought the old thing here for, then? People that own elephants don't take their elephants around with 'em when they go visiting. What's he got it here for?"

"I'm sure I don't know," said Mr. Minister, resuming his paper. "You might ask him."

Isabel laughed and patted her husband's shoulder again. "Aren't you going to dress? Aren't we all going to the dance?"

He groaned faintly. "Aren't your brother and George enough for you and Fanny?"

"Wouldn't you enjoy it at all?" "You know I don't."

Isabel let her hand remain upon his shoulder a moment longer; she stood behind him, looking into the fire. George, watching her broodingly, thought there was more color in her face than the reflection of the flames accounted for. "Well, then," she said indulgently, "stay at home and be happy. We won't urge you if you'd really rather not."

"We Won't Urge You If You'd Really Rather Not."

"I really wouldn't," he said contentedly.

Half an hour later George was passing through the upper hall in a bathrobe stage of preparation for the evening's gayeties, when he encountered his Aunt Fanny. He stopped her. "Look here!" he said.

"What in the world is the matter with you?" she demanded, regarding him with little amiability. "You look as if you were rehearsing for a villain in a play."

His expression gave no sign of yielding to the request; on the contrary, his somberness deepened. "I suppose you don't know why father doesn't want to go tonight?" he said solemnly.

"He never wants to go anywhere that I ever heard of," said Fanny. "What is the matter with you?"

"He doesn't want to go because he doesn't like this man Morgan. Look here, what makes you and—everybody so excited over him?"

"Excited!" she jeered. "Can't people be glad to see an old friend without silly children like you having to make a do about it? I've just been in your mother's room suggesting that she might give a little dinner for them."

"For who?"

"For whom, George? For Mr. Morgan and his daughter."

"Look here!" George said quickly. "Don't do that! Mother hasn't do that. It wouldn't look well."

"Wouldn't look well!" Fanny mocked him; and her unexpressed vehemence betrayed a surprising acerbity. "See here, George, Minister, I suggest that you just march straight on into your room and fetch your dressing! Sometimes you say things that show you have a pretty mean little mind!"

George was so astounded by this outburst that his indignation was delayed by his curiosity. "Why, what upsets you this way?" he inquired.

"I know what you mean," she said, her voice still lowered, but not decreasing in sharpness. "You're trying to insinuate that I'd get you or mother to invite Eugene Morgan here on my account because he's a widower!" "I am!" George gasped, nonplused. "I'm trying to insinuate that you're setting your cap at him and getting mother to help you? Is that what you mean?"

Beyond a doubt that was what Miss Fanny meant. She gave him a white-hot look. "You attend to your own affairs!" she whispered fiercely, and swept away.

George, dumfounded, returned to his room for meditation.

He had lived for years in the same house with his Aunt Fanny, and it now appeared that during all those years he had been thus intimately associating with a total stranger. Never before had he met the passionate lady with whom he had just held a conversation in the hall. So she wanted to get married! And wanted George's mother to help her with this horseless-carriage widower!

"Well, I will be shot!" he muttered aloud. "I well—I certainly will be shot!" And he began to laugh. "Lord, might!"

But presently, at the thought of the horseless-carriage widower's daughter, his grimace returned, and he resolved upon a line of conduct for the evening. He would not be her carelessly when he first saw her; and after that he would notice her no more he would not dance with her; he would not favor her in the cotillion—he would not go near her!

He descended to dinner upon the third urgent summons of the colored butler, having spent two hours dressing—and rehearsing.

The Hon. George Ambersson was a congressman who led cotillions—the sort of congressman an Ambersson would be. He did it negligently to-night, yet with infatigable dexterity, now and then glancing humorously at the spectators, a people of his own age.

George had carried out his rehearsed projects with precision. He had given Miss Morgan a nod studied into perfection during his lengthy toilet before dinner. "Oh, yes, I do seem to remember that curious little outsider," this nod seemed to say. Thereafter all cognizance of her evaporated; the curious little outsider was permitted no further existence within the struggle. Nevertheless she flashed in the corner of his eyes too often. She seemed to be having a "wonderful time!"

An unbearable soreness accumulated in his chest, his dislike of the girl and her conduct increased until he thought of leaving this sickening assembly and going home to bed. That would show her! But just then he heard her laughing and decided that it wouldn't show her. So he remained.

When the young couples seated themselves in chairs against the walls round three sides of the room for the cotillion George joined a hazy-eyed group clustering about the doorway—youths with no partners, yet eligible to be "called out" and favored. He marked that his uncle placed the infernal Kinney and Miss Morgan, as the leading couple, in the first chairs at the head of the line upon the leader's right; and this disloyalty on the part of Uncle George was inexcusable for in the family circle the nephew had often expressed his opinion of Fred Kinney. In his bitterness George uttered a significant monosyllable.

The music flourished, whereupon Mr. Kinney, Miss Morgan and six of their neighbors rose and waltzed knowingly. Mr. Ambersson's whistle blew; then the eight young people went to the favor table and were given toys and trinkets wherewith to delight the new partners it was now their privilege to select.

George strolled with a bored air to the tropical grove, where sat his elders, and seated himself beside his Uncle Sydney. His mother leaned across Miss Fanny, raising her voice over the music to speak to him.

"George, nobody will be able to see you here. You'll not be favored. You ought to be where you can dance."

"Don't care to," he returned "Bore!"

"But you ought—" She stopped and laughed, waving her fan to direct his attention behind him. "Look—Over your shoulder!"

He turned and discovered Miss

Lucy Morgan in the act of offering him a purple toy balloon.

"I found you!" she laughed. George was startled. "Well—" he said.

"Would you rather sit it out?" Lucy asked quickly as he did not move. "I don't care to dance if you—"

"No," he said, rising. "It would be better to dance." His tone was solemn, and solemnly he departed with her from the grove. Solemnly he danced with her.

Four times, with not the slightest encouragement, she brought him a favor: four times in succession. When the fourth came, "Look here!" said George huskily. "You going to keep this up all night? What do you mean by it?"

For an instant she seemed confused. "That's what cotillions are for, aren't they?" she murmured. "What do you mean? What they're for?"

"So that a girl can dance with a person she wants to?"

George's huskiness increased. "Well, do you mean you want to dance with me all the time—all evening?"

"Well, this much of it—evidently," she laughed.

"Is it because you want to even things up for making me angry—I mean for hurrying my feelings on the way home?"

With her eyes averted—for girls of nineteen can be as shy as boys, sometimes—she said, "Well—you only got angry because I couldn't dance the cotillion with you. I—I didn't feel terribly hurt with you for getting angry about that."

"Was there any other reason? Did my telling you I liked you have anything to do with it?"

She looked up gently and as George met her eyes something exquisitely touching yet queerly delightful gave him a catch in the throat. She looked instantly away, and, turning, ran out from the palm grove, where they stood, to the dancing floor.

"Come on!" she cried. "Let's dance!"

He followed her.

"See here—I—I—" he stammered. "You mean—Do you—"

"No, no," she laughed. "Let's dance!"

He put his arm about her almost tremulously and they began to waltz. It was a happy dance for both of them.

Christmas day is the children's, but the holidays are youth's dancing time. The holidays belong to the early twenties and the teens, home from school and college. It is the liveliest time in life, the happiest of the irresponsible times in life. Mothers echo its happiness—nothing is like a mother who has a son home from college, except another mother with a son home from college. Yet they give up their sons to the daughters of other mothers, and find it proud rapture enough to be allowed to sit and watch.

Thus Isabel watched George and Lucy dancing as together they danced away the holidays of that year into the past.

"They seem to get along better than they did at first, those two children," Fanny, Minister said sitting beside her at the Sharrons' dance a week after the Assembly. "They seemed to be always having little quarrels of some sort at first. At least George did. He seemed to be continually pecking at that lovely, dainty little Lucy, and being cross with her over nothing."

"Pecking?" Isabel laughed. "What a word to use about George! I think I never knew a more angelically amiable disposition in my life!"

ATLANTIC POLARINE

THAT motor-oil "problem" is no problem at all, once you get this simple, primary fact pasted squarely in your hat, to wit:

No matter what car you drive, or when, or where, or how, there is one of the four Atlantic Motor Oils that is exactly right for that car under certain conditions. Ask your garageman.

Miss Fanny echoed her sister-in-law's laugh but it was a rueful echo, and not sweet. "He's amiable to you," she said. "That's all the side of him you ever happen to see. And why wouldn't he be amiable to anybody that simply fell down and worshipped him every minute of her life? Most of us would!"

"Isn't he worth worshipping? Just look at him!"

"Oh, I'm not going to argue with you about George," said Miss Fanny. "I'm fond enough of him, for that matter. He can be charming, and he's certainly stunning looking, if only—"

"Let the 'if only' go, dear," Isabel suggested good naturedly. "Let's talk about that dinner you thought I should—"

"I?" Miss Fanny interrupted quickly. "Didn't you want to give it yourself?"

"Indeed I did, my dear!" said Isabel heartily. "I only meant that unless you had proposed it perhaps I wouldn't!"

But here Eugene came for her to dance, and she left the sentence uncompleted. Holiday dances can be happy for youth renewed as well as for youth in bud—and yet it was not with the air of a rival that Miss Fanny watched her brother's wife dancing with the widower, Miss Fanny's eyes narrowed a little, but only as if her mind engaged in a hopeful calculation. She looked pleased.

CHAPTER VIII.

A few days after George's return to the university it became evident that not quite everybody had gazed with complete benevolence upon the various young collegians at their holiday sports. The Sunday edition of the principal morning paper even expressed some bitterness under the heading, "Gilded Youths of the Fin de Siècle"—this was considered the knowing phrase of the time, especially for Sunday supplements—and there is no doubt that from certain references in this bit of writing some people drew the conclusion that Mr. George Ambersson Minister had not yet got his come-uppance, a postponement still irritating. Undoubtedly Fanny Minister was one of the people who drew this conclusion, for she cut the article out and inclosed it in a letter to her nephew, having written on the border of the clipping, "I wonder whom it can mean!"

George read part of it:

We debate sometimes what is to be the future of this nation when we think that in a few years public affairs may be in the hands of the up-to-date gilded youths we see about us during the Christmas holidays. Such foppish luxury such dissipation were surely never produced by the so-called overbearing patricians of the Palatine even in Rome's most decadent epoch. With his air of young mildred his fast horses his gold and silver cigarette cases his clothes and a New York tailor his recklessness of money showered upon him by indulgent mothers or dotting grandfathers, he respects nothing and nobody. He is blasé. If you please, Mr. Minister, let a social function, how commendably he deigns to select a partner for the popular waltz or two-step, how carefully he shoulders older people out of his way, with what a blank stare he returns the salutations of some old acquaintance whom he may choose to greet when he is forced to do so.

One wonders what has come over the new generation. Of such as these the republic was not made. When we compare the young manhood of Abraham Lincoln with the specimens we are now producing we see too well that it bodes ill for the twentieth century.

George yawned and tossed the clipping into his waste basket, wondering why his aunt thought such dull nonsense worth the sending. As for her insinuation, puzzled upon the border, he supposed she meant to joke—a supposition which neither surprised him nor altered his lifelong opinion of her wit.

He read her letter with more interest:

The dinner your mother gave for the Morgans was a lovely affair. It was last Monday evening, just ten days after you left. It was appropriate that your mother should have an old friend, should assemble a representative selection of Mr. Morgan's old friends around him at such a time. He was in great spirits and most entertaining.

He will soon begin to build his factory here for the manufacture of automobiles, which he says is a turn he prefers to horse carriages. Your Uncle George told me he would like to invest in this factory, as George thinks there is a future for automobiles perhaps not for general use, but as an interesting novelty, which people with sufficient means would like to own for their amusement and the honor of their families. Your Uncle George thought Mr. Morgan's old friends around him at such a time. He was in great spirits and most entertaining.

Artless Mendacity.

The good old days we truly prize When falsehood seldom bought A theme that went beyond the size Of fish that were not caught.

The Discovery.

"Why is it we can't sing that round harmoniously?" "Don't you see? The accompanist is playing on a square piano."

Poor Policy.

"Everything comes to him who waits." "Maybe, but that's a mighty poor way of getting things."
